Stories are powerful, and stories that contain political or moral arguments have the power to move people. We will learn how to create a 'cantastoria' (an Italian word meaning 'sung story'), a form of storytelling that is found on every continent and has been around for hundreds of years.

A picture or series of pictures on banners or panels is accompanied by a narrator, and sometimes musicians or singers, dancers, puppets, and much more. The possibilities are endless! Using paper and markers, we'll make a first draft of a cantastoria that can be performed on the streets or almost anywhere to disseminate information and connect people to people and issues. In a matter of hours, we'll choreograph a performance!
